➤ Understanding Conflict

Observe how conflicts can develop within diverse teams, develop your ability to flag non-inclusive behaviour and practise relationship-building skills.

Experience a realistic scenario of communicating with another person. Practice active listening, identify inappropriate behaviour, and give constructive feedback. Practice to become more thoughtful, articulate and understand when viewing conflict in a business environment.

Objectives:

- Learn effective listening skills
- Acknowledge the need to be aware of stereotyping
- Identify inappropriate behaviour
- Practise relationship-building skills
- Practise giving constructive feedback.
- Practise applying techniques to manage conflict

➤ Active Listening

Identify poor active listening habits, experience what lack of active listening feels like and practise active listening behaviours like clarifying, summarising or acknowledging emotions.

Experience realistic scenarios of communicating with another person. Practice active listening in an office environment - and become a more engaged, thoughtful member of the team.

Objectives:

- Apply leadership and communication techniques to drive business success and become a more effective leader
- Implement best practices for influencing employees, managers, subordinates, customers and other stakeholders
- Effectively handle challenges such as delivering unpopular news, increasing team motivation and restoring credibility
- Communicate confidently in any environment, from elevator pitches to high stakes presentations that earn buy-in and cooperation
- Deliver powerful messages that lead to action and that control emotions when facing resistance
- Sell your organization's vision, mission and values to your team members

➤ Resolving Conflict

Observe how a leader's own behaviour can perpetuate inappropriate behaviour, develop skills to help others address the source of their conflicts and practise coaching others to lead by example.

Diversity isn't just about bringing different people together, it's about creating an environment where everyone feels welcome and accepted. This scenario looks at a set of techniques that will help you resolve conflicts by coaching the manager to do so.
